	Enjoy looking through your search results. Open and view documents that interest you. A document can be anything from a newspaper article, to a photograph, to a PDF, to a video.
	Things to know
	What ProQuest is doing with the words you entered:
	ProQuest looks for your words (search terms) in the following document information: document titles authors
	• abstract
	• subjects
	Turi text
	If you enter more than one word, eternal love for example, ProQuest will look for documents that contain both eternal and love in any of the document information listed above.
	Search for an exact phrase
	Surround your words with quotation marks—"eternal love" or "life after death"—to force ProQuest to look for your words as a phrase only, rather than finding each word separately.
	Find out what databases you're searching
	Information about what databases you are currently searching is displayed in the center of the blue bar at the top of the ProQuest window. Here's an example of how it looks:
	You are searching: 81 databases (See list Change >>) Use the links to view the current list and select or deselect databases.
	Limit your search
	 Select the Full text checkbox to find only documents that provide the complete full text, versus just a citation or abstract. Select the Scholarly journals checkbox to find only documents from academically oriented journals.
	Search term suggestions as you enter your search (often called autocomplete)
	As you type in the search box, you'll notice that a list of terms - always based on what you've typed at any point - begins to display beneath the box. These terms are in a dictionary built from previous successful searches by all users. Click a term in the list to search on it immediately.
